

An underground labyrinth. At any tube junction, such as that at Piccadilly Circus, shown in this sectional view, an enormous amount of tunnelling has been necessary, for passages, lifts and escalators, to provide communication between one line and the other, and with the surface.